BRITAIN TO USE
NEUTRAL FLAG;
TWO SHIPS SUNK

All Traffic Is Canceled From England to French Ports.

WILHELMINA PRIZE COURT

British Government Announces American Vessel Bound for Germany With Food Cargo Must Await Decision of Tribunal.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Great Britain's official declaration in defense of the use by British merchant ships of neutral flags failed to change the international situation arising because of the war zone and flag questions in the opinion of administration officials, except that it possibly opens the way for further exchange of diplomatic notes between the United States and England and the United States and Germany.

At the same time it was admitted that the blowing up by a mine of an American ship with the possible loss of American lives might bring the issue to a crisis, and the feeling of apprehension still prevails in official circles. The general opinion that no effort would be made by the Washington government to halt American commerce with Europe has not changed, and this, taken in connection with Germany's disclaimer of responsibility for anything that might happen to neutral ships either from submarines or mines, served to keep up the anxiety.

To Hold the Wilhelmina.

London, Feb. 22.—The cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina will be held by the British government pending a decision of the prize court.

And British merchant vessels will continue to use the American flag, or any other flag, whenever they think it necessary to do so to escape destruction.

If this results in destruction of an American vessel by a German submarine, the United States government must look to Germany—not to England—for redress.

This announcement was made by Sir Edward Grey, foreign secretary.

In a memorandum relating to the controversy between Great Britain and the United States over foodstuffs it is made clear that Great Britain intends to declare all foodstuffs for Germany contraband.

Germans Violate Law.

After reviewing the German methods of warfare and denouncing them as in violation of all international usages, Sir Edward says:

"If, therefore, his majesty's government should hereafter feel constrained to declare foodstuffs absolute contraband or to take other measures for interfering with German trade by way of reprisals, they confidently expect that such action will not be challenged on the part of the neutral states by appealing to laws and usages of war whose validity rests on their forming an integral part of that system of international doctrine which, as a whole, the enemy frankly boasts the continuation to disregard so long as such neutral states cannot compel the German government to abandon methods of warfare which have not in recent history been regarded as having the sanction of either law or humanity."

Use of Flag Defended.

The foreign office transmitted to Ambassador Page its reply to the American protest against a general use by British merchant vessels of the American flag.

The note admits that the Cunarder Lusitania on her most recent voyage from New York to Liverpool raised the American flag, but only "to save the lives of non-combatants, crew and passengers."

It demands that it is the intention of the British government to advise British merchant vessels to use foreign flags, but makes it clear that the use of foreign flags will be permitted. The note defending the practice cites the fact that the United States used the British flag for a like purpose during the Civil war.

Three ships were blown up in the German's war zone, one of them a neutral vessel.

Amsterdam, Feb. 22.—That the destruction of Zeppelins L-2 and L-4 has deprived the German admiralty of all its dirigibles is the assertion made by the Nieuwsc Van Den Dug.

Copenhagen, Feb. 22.—The Norwegian steamship Björke struck a mine in the North sea, while bound from Leith to Narstorp with a cargo of coal, and foundered. The crew was saved.

The outcome of this conflict is regarded here as being of the greatest importance. The situation of the Austrian and German armadas is asserted to be highly favorable to their ultimate success.

Unofficial estimates of the troops engaged on the Carpathian front fix the number of Russians at 600,000 and the Austro-German troops at 675,000 a total of 1,275,000.

Work on Appropriation Bills.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Work on grinding out the big appropriation bills continuing in the senate Saturday. Consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation measure carrying $39,000,000 a sum to come for the State Association memorable.

Marched to the Revolution.

United States Marines Stop the March of the Revolutionary Forces on the Capital.

Cape Haitien, Haiti, Feb. 22.—The march of the revolutionary forces of General Guillaume against Port-au-Prince has been stopped as the result of the landing of 400 United States marines in the capital. Four United States warships are in the harbor at Port-au-Prince, and the situation there is described as critical.

MOVED.

March and Douglas have moved their store to F. J. Yenger's jewelry store, on Main street, and ask their friends to call and see them. Will soon have on display a beautiful line of Spring Millinery. They guarantee satisfaction. 7-2.

Accidents will happen, but the best regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Emetic Oil for such contingencies. Two 5-oz. and 5-oz. at all stores. —Adv.

UNITED STATES TO FILE PROTEST

Will Resent the Destruction of American Merchantmen on the High Seas.

AS TO FLOATING MINES

This is One of the Gravest Factors in the Situation—Signs That Great Britain Has Fear of the Blockade.

By A. M. JAMIESON.

(Special Correspondent of the International News Service of the White House.)

Washington, Feb. 22.—The United States will not accept Germany's disclaimer of responsibility for blowing up American merchantmen by German submarine. It is to be seen.

This will be made a little clearer in a note to the German note to be sent by the United States, it is learned.

The note will not be so belligerent in manner, it was stated, but will leave no doubt as to the American position.

It is expected the reply will be sent to the German foreign office early in the week and it is understood that Councillor Lansing of the state department now is drafting it at the direction of President Wilson.

Whether any further negotiations will be undertaken with the British government as a result of the latter's refusal to prohibit the use of the American flag on British merchantmen in the war zone has not been determined.

Great Britain, it was stated, clearly is within its rights under international law, and probably no further exceptions will be taken as to the United States.

Floating Mines Cause Alarm.

One of the greatest factors in the situation is the threat of Germany to place floating mines in the shipping area surrounding Great Britain. These floating mines can be carried anywhere by the various currents of the Atlantic, and quite conceivably might blow up a ship in American coast waters.

It was stated by certain officials of the government that their use is a clear violation of The Hague convention, and it is likely that this may form a central feature of the American reply.

Fish and Game Improvement.

Progress and plans in the re-stocking of Kentucky with big game and birds and the streams with fish occupied most of the session of the State Game and Fish Commission.

The county is in debt a few thousand dollars, and two of the magistrates favored getting out of debt before launching into permanent road building, but now that the proposition has been voted on, they will lend their hearty support.

The final decision was hastened by the argument of Road Engineer Francis Friel, who recently came home from the Lexington school of road instruction full of enthusiasm. He pointed out the advantages and the economy of macadam roads, and also showed that if the county did not take advantage of the offer of state aid that it would be contributing 5 per cent of its taxes to other counties without getting anything for it. Several roads had to be closed, and the road on which the best subscriptions are received will get the first permanent work.

Ask State Aid in Road Building.

The Hancock county fiscal court voted in favor of making an appropriation for roads and of asking state aid.

Dr. R. L. Breck Dead.

Dr. Robt. L. Breck died at his home in Palo Alto, Cal., on the 15th inst., aged 88 years.

Dr. Breck was perhaps one of the most distinguished citizens of Madison county. He was born in this city May 8th, 1827, and spent the greater part of his life here. He was the son of Judge

Daniel Breck, who was one of the most eminent of Kentucky's lawyers, and was a Judge of the Court of Appeals from 1843 to 1849, and also a member of the 31st Congress. He was a brother of our distinguished lawyer, Judge C. H. Breck,

who survived him.

Dr. Breck was a graduate of Center

College, Danville, and studied theology at Alleghany Seminary and Princeton, being a classmate of Dr. Joseph Wilson, father of President Wilson. When Dr.

Breck married Miss Martha Rodes, of Richmond, in 1847, Dr. Wilson was his groomsmen.

Dr. Breck was a noted educator and was regarded as one of the ablest advocates in the State. His first charge was the Presbyterian church at Versailles, and he held charges in other States, his last pastorate being at Berkeley, Cal.

The remains were brought to this city last Saturday and were accompanied by his relatives, and laid to rest by the side of his beloved wife. Many friends gathered to attend the grave. Judge Breck was ill and unable to attend the funeral.

In our next issue we will give a more extended account of the life of this good man.

"THE WOLF"

This Well-Known Play At Alhambra Today.

"The Wolf" is a drama taken from the book and play of that name. It was played in this city a few years ago and was the hit of the season. "The Wolf" will be presented today in 6 reels, with the matinee and void the rush at night.

Thursday we present for the last time

Mr. Francis X. Bushman in "The Plum

Tree," a prize mystery drama from the Ladies World. Seven (7) reels will be shown. Don't miss these two big features. You will enjoy them both.

Oratorical Contest.

The annual oratorical contest of Caldwell High School was held in the auditorium of that building Friday night.

The contestants were Alfred Douglas, representing the Freshman class, whose subject was "Billy Brad and a Big Lie."

The young gentleman gave every evidence of an orator and he was named by many as the winner. Following this came Mr. Neville Todd, of the Sophomore class, whose subject was "Shadow's Pardon." He delivered himself very pleasingly. Mr. Frank Powell, of the Junior class, spoke on "Freedom and Patriotism," and held the attention of the audience. Then came Mr. Joe Giu-mighan Jr., on "The Secret of Lincoln's Power," and he delivered himself with characteristic individuality.

In the girls' contest Miss Mossie All-man recited "The Swan Song" very beautifully. She was followed by Miss Frances Keist, of the Sophomore class, whose subject was "Threadneedle Street." She was very graceful and enthusiastic in her delivery. Miss Elizabeth Terrill, of the Junior class, recited the touching story of "The Little Newsboy." Miss Terrill had most charming personality and her delivery was most excellent. Miss Katie Smith, of the Senior class, delivered "The Soul of The Violin" and in doing so was as charming as the declamation.

Preceding and during the recitations,

the High School Orchestra discoursed some well chosen selections.

The enthusiastic admirers of the different contestants tested their lung capacity throughout the evening and added much to the merriment of the occasion.

Then came the most exciting part of it all. The judges, Rev. R. L. Telford,

Prof. Caldwell, of this city, and Mr.

Darnaby, of Winchester, retired and consulted, deliberated, voted and with some difficulty reached a conclusion, after which Mr. Darnaby was escorted to the rostrum, where he announced the decision. Mr. Frank Powell proved to be the winner in the boy's contest and was awarded a five-dollar gold piece.

Miss Mossie Allman was the winner in girl's contest and likewise received a shining five-dollar gold coin.

The evening was a very happy and pleasant one, long to be remembered by the contestants and their friends.

CLARK COUNTY.
Judge W. C. Taylor, of Winchester, entered the race for the office of county judge of Clark, last week.

At the regular meeting of the Clark fiscal court, the county made a request for the amount due them for reconstructing their roads. Clark county is entitled to about $12,000.

The first Moonlight school in Winchester was opened last Monday in the public school building. Many aged colored people entered the school and are taking much interest in the work.

A wholesale tobacco company, known as the French Tobacco Co., filed articles of incorporation last week to do business in Winchester. The new company has a capital stock of $2,000.

A deal has been closed in Winchester for practically all the hemp in Clark county in 1914 at a price said to be the highest ever paid. N. F. Brent, of Paris, was the purchaser, and the price paid was $8 per cwt.

FAYETTE COUNTY.

The board of supervisors at Lexington adjourned last week, after increasing the county assessment more than $3,000,000 over that of last year. A number of suits will be filed because the board remained in session longer than the law provides.

Thos. Crews, a well known farmer of Fayette county, aged 33, was found dead with a shot in his heart. It is not known whether he killed himself or whether it was a brutal murder. Later three shots were fired through the heart.

JESSAMINE COUNTY.

S. E. Holloway, of Nicholasville, has announced himself as a candidate for re-election for circuit clerk of Jessamine county.

R. H. Henderson, who operates a mill near the L. & N. station in Nicholasville, has received an order from a wholesale grocery firm for 20,000 bushels of meal, to be delivered within the next few weeks. The problem with Mr. Henderson is, where can he get the corn to grind into so much meal.

BOURBON COUNTY.

Within 24 hours of each other, Mrs. McCordle and her husband, Mr. John McCordle, were called by death. Mrs. McCordle was ill only a few days with pneumonia. Her husband's death, it is said by his physicians, was caused principally by the shock of his wife's death. One daughter, Miss Julia McCordle, survives them.

John J. Williams, Sr., 70, died at his home in Paris, last Monday afternoon, following a short illness. He was one of the best known and most respected citizens of the county and leaves many friends. He is survived by two sons—Warren, who holds a responsible position with the L. & N., and John J. Williams, the well-known Paris attorney, who married Miss Tillie Tribble, of this city.

BOYLE COUNTY.

John Walker, the negro arrested last week for the murder of some months ago of the little girl, Zelma Young, in Danville, and whose examining trial was held in that city last week, with another negro was placed in jail for further examination by the grand jury. The negro claims now since his trial that the whole thing is a "frame-up" and declares what he's aware of his trial was untrue. He now says the West Virginia detective agreed to give him $50, a new suit of clothes and a job in his detective agency for life.

Hon. J. W. Rawlings, of Danville, is reported, will be a probable candidate for Attorney General. Mr. Rawlings is a trained lawyer and a fine scholar. He will probably announce his candidacy in a few weeks.

Samuel Burke was appointed postmaster at Junction City to succeed W. C. Surber, recently deceased.

The bloodhounds purchased by the Danville police department at $75 each, have arrived in the city.

On Monday night of last week Geo. McCown, a well-known barber of Danville, returning to his home encountered a wildcat on his back porch, eating a large steak which he had previously purchased. He mistook it for a dog and kicked it at, but soon discovered his mistake when the creature showed fight.

RUNAWAY JUNE

FIFTH EPISODE
A Woman in Trouble.

FAT old black Aunt Debby was dressed in her best marketing clothes, the green percale with the big yellow flowers, and the little blue net with the nodding red poppies was set far forward on her kinkless wig. The marketing trip to the city had been one of Aunt Debby's chief joys, but today the buoyancy and the high pitched mirth of excitement were absent.

"You'll stop at Ned's for Mr. Moore, Debby," said Mrs. Moore.

"Yes, yes," Aunt Debby awoke a glance at June's portrait on the wall. "You ain't heard nothin' yet of Miss June!"

At the sound of that name Bouncer rose instantly, head up, ears perked, tail wagging, eyes eager, mouth open. He was at the window with his paws on the sill and ready to bark. He wibled instead and dropped his paws to the floor.

Where was June? That puzzling problem filled the entire mind of Aunt Debby as by the side of the driver she spun into the city in the Moon Ilumino. And that puzzling problem filled the entire mind of John Moore as he sat in his office.

Today the Buoyancy and High Pitched Laughs Were Absent.

Where was June? A dozen private detectives were scouring the city of New York for her, and they reported to a stern faced young man who sat in the lonely apartments which June and he had fitted up to be their nest, his only companion a miniature of his tovally bride.

Where was June? Who was this mysterious Gilbert Blye? What was his power over Ned Warner's bride?

Ned scolded his bat and strode forth into the streets in his never ending search for June.

At that moment the door of a strange house had slammed abruptly behind beautiful June Warner. And Gilbert Blye had furnished this address to June's employment agency.

A blase looking page girl inspected June impulsively in the dim light of the hall, then with a significant grin left June standing there and swaggered through a door at the end of the hall. June was startled as that door opened and a blaze of light came out with the chatter of many shrill voices. In there, amid wreaths of curling blue smoke, moved handsomely gowned women, and many of them nonchalantly puffed at cigarettes. At that instant the smiling Gilbert Blye's key grated in the lock.

A large yellow haired woman came bursting from the salon with June's employment agency card in her hand.

With a smile upon his lips and glinting in his dark eyes he hurried straight back toward the little room in which stood June, now alone and frightened.

At that instant a huge, clumsy maid came tumbling up from the basement, followed by a pair of yellow smoke. With her eyes distended and her mouth open, ready for the yell of "Fire!" she rushed to the door of the salon, but before she could reach it Gilbert Blye had her roughly by the arm and pushed her through the door which led to the basement. He stood staring at the smoke which came curling ominously through that opening, glanced again toward June's room and dashed down the stairs.

• • • • •

That was a strangely furnished little room in which June found herself.

There were two desks and a filing cabinet and some office chairs, but there were a luxurios couch and faint hangings, a soft rug, and pink paneled walls and ceiling. It was all so incongruous. And the work—it was queer too. The yellow haired woman came in from the parlor presently and explained the posting into small blank books of many memorandum slips. Each explained the name of a woman and a sum of money. There were no slips for men, but there were index cards about men. June puzzled as to what sort of business this might be.

The page girl switched in with one of the memorandum slips. The yellow head, whose face was puffy and more highly colored than was wholesome, took the slip, looked at the name on it, frowned, shook her head and went out with the girl. She entered the salon and stood surveying the scene with cold abstraction. Around a long table sat the women whom June had seen. They all had cards in front of them and stacks of playing chips, and a raw-boned woman sitting on a higher chair than the rest was dealing. The yellow haired woman sat down on the dealer. She was a fluffy blond with a feverish glint in her eyes, and she was bent so intently upon the fall of the cards that she did not notice the door open and June stood agast. A gambling house!

Ned! Why had she run away from him?

In the gambling room the fluffy blond who had played so feverishly staked and lost the last chip in front of her. She turned impatiently to look for the page girl. She met instead the cold, hard eyes of the yellow haired woman who quietly informed her. The player rose reluctantly, and a fight came into her face, as she followed into the hall and into the little office where June had been installed.

"You've reached the limit, Mrs. Perry," announced the yellow haired woman, turning on the unlucky one sharply as she closed the door. "Here is the L. O. U. Belle brought to me. I have not O. K. d'it."

"It's only for $50," faltered Mrs. Perry.

"I won't O. K. it for 50 cents," snapped the other. "Now, I want action. You'll telephone your husband from this room."

"No, no!" The woman wrung her hands. "I'll talk to him tonight."

"I know that game," she scolded, and from June's desk she took an index card.

"Eight-o'-eight-o Garden," she told the new secretary. "Ask for Mr. Perry, and say that his wife wishes to speak with him."

"Not!" cried Mrs. Perry hysterically, and reached over June's shoulder to take the phone. The new secretary had made no move toward the phone. She was staring at the yellow haired woman in astonishment. That determined person was not one to wrangle in emergencies. She snatched up the phone herself and called the number.

"You women think I'm a mark," she scowled, "who's Miss June?"

Aunt Debby! Her two fat black bands were gripped on Marie's arm. A crowd began to gather immediately. Marie straightened herself quickly.

"Don't know me!" Aunt Debby whizzed, her broad bosoms jumping up and down. "Say you don't know me! Ain't I Debby? Ain't you Ma'rie?"

Marie with a sudden jerk freed her self from that earnest grasp and would have been far down the street had it not been for the thickening crowd. Aunt Debby, plowing forward with unbelievable agility, threw both arms around her.

"What's the matter here?" The gruff voice of a big policeman.

"I want that woman took in charge," panted Aunt Debby, and she rolled her eyes.

"Oh, you do?" And the officer of the law turned on Marie an eye which was just as ready to be suspicious in spite of her disingenuous. "What's the charge?"

The voice of Aunt Debby rose shrilly triumphant.

"She done stole my pocketbook!"

It was Marie's turn to look astounded.

"Oh, she did! When? Here in the market?"

"Yas, sir, she did. Right up hyah at the chicken stand!"

"Well, what's that on your arm?"

And Aunt Debby's eyes dropped as she saw the stern gaze of the policeman fixed on the rusty old hand bag which gripped her thick forearm. She had forgotten that detail to be planning.

"Open it up," ordered the officer, who opened it himself. It had bills and silver in it, Aunt Debby's reading spectacles and her farsighted ones, some peppermint lozenges, Brunette face powder and a tea biscuit.

"Well—well—well!" gulped Aunt Debby, her eyes bating. "She done stole my other pocketbook!"

"That's enough," growled the officer.

"No negro ever had two pocketbooks. What have you got to say, miss?"

"I don't know her, Mr. Officer," said Marie.

"You, Marie," screamed Aunt Debby, "you say you don't know me?"

"Go on about your business," ordered the big policeman.

"I don't leave this spot without that girl," declared Aunt Debby, planting her fist on her hips and spreading her feet apart. Then the outraged majesty of the law asserted itself.

"Hah, Billy! Call the wagon!" it yelled.

The man's voice boomed an incredulous exclamation over the wire; then a sharp question.

"Why—why, it's to pay billets! Yes, Jack, I know I was supposed to keep them paid out of my allowance!"

I didn't want to tell you this until we could sit down quietly together, only they're pressing me for payment. And the allowance isn't enough, Jackson."

The man's heavy voice had interrupted her calmly, coldly. She sank back limply in the chair.

June hung up the receiver. She was surprised to see the yellow haired woman put up her own phone and come across the room with a benign expression.

"Cheer up," she advised. "Hubby's all right."

Marie Perry straightened up.

"Yes," she said and moistened her lips.

"He said that he'd go over there."

June with me tonight." She heard him murmur. And the yellow haired woman grinned across at June. "Here's your L. O. U., dearie. I've O. K. d'it. You better go in and play awhile for your nerves."

The terrified little blond looked up incredulously. It was as if she had been given a drink of some strong stimulant, and she clutched eagerly at the memorandum slip. Perhaps with that she could win back all that she had lost!

"Thank you!" she gasped and burst from the room.

The other woman grabbed her phone. "Eight-o'-eight-o Garden," she called. "Hello, Mr. Perry, please. This is his wife's friend."

June moved for her hat and coat.

"Hello, Mr. Perry! Say, your wife is at 48 Kingsley court and is going to be exposed in half an hour if you aren't here to pay her debts."

The man at the other end of the wire apparently took a moment to gasp for breath; then the wire boomed.

"All right, bring the police if you want," snapped the yellow haired woman.

"I guess I can stink the notoriety if you and your wife can. And, say, checks don't go. Bring cash. It's fifty-five now."

June stood agast. A gambling house!

CHAPTER II.

A HEAVY jawed, firm mouthed, square headed and level eyed man stopped at the door of 48 Kingsley court and rang the bell with a vigorous jerk.

"Mr. Perry," he announced bluntly.

"Yes, sir," replied the impudent page girl, by no means abashed, and she threw open the parlor door. "It's in there. She grinned as she switched on the lights, balanced down the steps and through the yard to the walled front on the other side.

As June sped away she heard the ring of the fire engines and the horse shouts of the gathering crowd in front of 48 Kingsley court.

The yellow haired woman found him standing solidly in the center of the room, facing the door.

"Where is my wife?" he loudly demanded.

"Don't bark at me!" snapped the yellow haired woman.

The man abated none of its intensity as he repeated his demand.

"Iu a minute." The yellow haired woman was quite calm and collected.

"I don't mind turning over a parlor to settle a domestic scrap, but I want my wife settled first. Eight-o'-eight-o."

"I don't know if I know that she is guilty of gambling." How do I know that she is here?

The woman's lip curled.

"Want to see her with the goods? Well, Jackson, if you'll promise to be here I'll show her to you through a hole in the wall."

The man's fists clinched convulsively.

"You'd better pass over my eight-o'-eight-o first," said the yellow haired woman.

"Just a minute, please." A sweet voice, low, gentle, cultured—no such voice as the man had expected to hear in this place. He was equally impressed when he turned and saw the beautiful young girl who had glided through the rear door, her face full of serious purpose.

"Who's this for you?" snapped the yellow haired woman, her eyes damp with instant resentment.

"Marie was on her knees in an instant, showing every gum.

"Aunt Debby," she cried, and from then on until long after the wonder of feature though she was, had found in herself an unexpected knock at the door.

"I stayed in this house for no reason than to see Mr. Perry," anounced June, with no trace of timidity about her.

"What do you know about this?"

"Mrs. Perry is in deep trouble and needs your help."

"She had no reason to be in trouble."

"I give it." Across June's mind was the thought that the man was as good as his word.

"You give it." June's mind was the thought that the man was as good as his word.

"Iu a minute." The yellow haired woman was quite calm and collected.

"I don't mind turning over a parlor to settle a domestic scrap, but that was all. He drew out a pocketbook and counted some money into the yellow haired woman's hand.

"Now, bring Gwen to me," he said, and his voice had no harshness, his eyes no sternness, his smile not bitter.

With moist eyes June hurried from the room. She was glad that she had stayed here, glad that she had come, very glad indeed, but now she was in a hurry to go!

The yellow haired woman took the phone and dialed the number of the police station.

"You're all right, Peachie," she approved, "but remember this, the fixer gets the blisters."

June was putting on her bat and coat when Mrs. Perry wonderingly followed the yellow haired woman through the hall. It was yellow head's regular plan of campaign to confront people with previous explanation. It served her well.

"Well, what's that on your arm?"

"I don't leave this spot without that girl," declared Aunt Debby, planting her fist on her hips and spreading her feet apart. Then the outraged majesty of the law asserted itself.

"Hah, Billy! Call the wagon!" it yelled.

A Remarkable Scene Greeted Us.

the fuse to burn down closer to the explosion point.

It was now within less than an inch of sure death.

Suddenly he raised it and hurried the deadly thing down through the hole. We could hear the imprecations of the crooks as it struck the cellar floor, near them.

"Leave the store—quick!" rang out Kennedy's voice.

Down below the crooks were beating a hasty retreat through a secret entrance which had been effected.

"The bag! The bag!" we could hear one of them below.

"The bomb—run!" cried another voice gruffly.

The explosion that followed lifted us fairly off our feet.

As the smoke from the explosion cleared away, Kennedy could be seen, the first to run forward.

Meanwhile Martin's detectives had rushed down a flight of back stairs that led into a coal cellar. With cold shot and hand anything they could lay hands on, they attacked the door that opened forward from the coal cellar into the front basement where the robbers had been.

A moment Kennedy and Bennett paused on the brink of the abyss which the bomb had made, waiting for the smoke to decrease. Then they began to climb down cautiously over the piled-up wreckage.

The explosion had set the basement afire, but the fire had not gained much headway by the time they reached the basement. Quickly Kennedy ran to the door into the coal cellar and opened it.

From the other side Martin, followed by the police and the detectives, burst in.

"Fire!" cried one of the policemen, leaping back to turn in alarm from the special apparatus upstairs.

All except Martin began beating out the flames, using such weapons as they already had in their hands to beat down the door.

To Martin there was one thing paramount: the jewels.

In the midst of the confusion, Elaine, closely followed by her friend, Susie, made her way fearlessly into the still of smoke down the stairs.

"There are your jewels, Mr. Martin," cried Kennedy, kicking the precious burlap bag with his foot as it had been so much ordinary merchandise, and turning toward what was in his mind the most important thing at stake—the direction taken by the agents of the Clutching Hand.

"Thank heaven!" exclaimed Martin, fairly pouncing on the bag and tearing it open. "They didn't get away with them—after all!" he exclaimed, examining the contents with satisfaction.

Events were moving rapidly.

The limousine had been standing innocently enough at the curb near the corner, with the taxicab close by.

Less than ten minutes after they had entered, three well-dressed men came out of the vacant shop, apparently from the tailor's above, and the crooks try anything, if they dared.

Just back of us, and around the corner, as we came in, we had noticed a limousine which had driven up. Three faultlessly attired dandies had entered a doorway down the street, as we learned afterward, apparently going to a fashionable tailor's which occupied the second floor of the old-fashioned building, the first floor having been renovated and made ready for renting. Had we been there a moment sooner we might have seen, I suppose, that one of them nodded to a taxicab driver, who was standing at a public hack stand a few feet up the block. The driver nodded unostentatiously back at the crooks.

Martin himself was evidently very nervous and very much alarmed. Indeed, no one could blame him for that. Merely to have been singled out by this amazing master criminal was enough to cause panic. Already had he engaged detectives, however, for whatever might happen, and they had advised him to leave the diamonds in the counter, clear the store and let the crooks try anything, if they dared.

Directly in front of me was a sign tacked up on a pillar, which read: "This store will be closed at noon to-day. Martin & Co."

All the customers were gone.

CATARRH OF HEAD AND STOMACH

Took Peruna
Five Bottles
Cured Me

Mr. Frank Richter, No. 303 East Second St., Winona, Minn., writes: "My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors, but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers, and five bottles cured me."

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know many cases have been satisfied with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. Give me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and catarrh of the stomach it is unsurpassed."

As a rule, people when ailing apply very properly to a doctor before resorting to a ready-to-take medicine. The great majority are cured by doctors. But per cent of chronic cases fail to find a cure and at last begin to use ready-to-take medicines. It is very noticeable indeed the number of people among our testifiers who say that it was only after the doctor had failed to cure them that they were induced to take Peruna. Then they find to their relief, to their joy, that Peruna is the remedy they should have taken at first.

Full Report of Grand Jury.

To Hon. J. M. Benton,
Judge Madison County Court.
Dear Sir: We, the jury empanelled to investigate the affairs of Madison county, beg leave to report that we have inquired diligently into all cases reported to us and find that the majority of lawlessness in this county is traceable to the use of intoxicants and the unlawful practice of pistol toting.

We believe that there is more or less whisky and beer sold in nearly every neighborhood in this county, but in the city of Richmond, under the shadow of her churches and court-house, we find the most flagrant violations of the local option law. We have had many witnesses before us, and exhausted our talent of interrogation, but the intoxicants or some other cause seems to have dimmed their eyesight and affected their memory until they fail to recognize faces or to remember names or dates. We believe that in many cases purchasers of boot-leg whisky could, if they would, give the information sought. The books of the Adams Express Co. and L. & N. Railroad Co. show an astonishing amount of whisky shipped into our county, and we believe in many instances fictitious names are used to deceive the public and thereby conceal the identity of the owner. We believe that the only way to lessen these shipments is to stimulate the guilty ones to justice is to stimulate a more concerned action among friends of temperance and to elect officers in sympathy with local option.

The next in importance to the illicit sale of whisky comes the pistol toter, with his attributes—homicide, shooting on the highway, disturbing the peace, terrorizing women, disturbing public worship, etc. We believe that these causes can be greatly reduced if the good people in every community would assist in furnishing evidence and our juries and officers would inflict the penalties now on our statute books without fear or favor.

In nearly every case of homicide that has come to us we believe that the killing might have been averted but for the over-ready, deadly pistol.

A committee of three was appointed to examine the license book for horse and jack licenses and they reported no irregularities.

We visited the county jail and found it in bad condition. The plumbing is out of fix and unsanitary. More closets are needed and bedding should be changed occasionally, and more liberal use of soap, water and disinfectants would add to the comfort of inmates and to the good name of Old Madison county.

There was some complaint among the prisoners about their fare, but we believe that they are now well fed and well treated.

Mr. Taylor tells us that the discipline for the most part is good. He explains the trouble he has in keeping the jail free of vermin so long as fresh recruits come in so frequently from "Rat Row." There are in jail at present 21 whites and 12 colored—20 males and two females, which takes the capacity of our jail, and this grand jury has emphasized the importance of rigid sanitary efforts on the part of Mr. Taylor while it is in such a crowded condition.

Our public highways in the county are in a deplorable condition, caused by the unusually bad weather and the heavy hauling over them while they are soft, and we urge the fiscal court to spend every available dollar on them during the coming season, that Madison county may be abreast of her sister counties in the matter of good roads.

The citizens of Richmond called our attention to the poor condition of some of the streets and sidewalks in the city of Richmond, namely East Main street, leading to the L. & N. R. R. depot, and Third street, leading to the tobacco warehouses. We had a majority of the City Council before us and they assured us that work would begin on these thoroughfares as soon as the weather would permit, and that they would be put in thorough condition.

A committee was sent to examine the county poor-house, near Union, and they reported the institution a disgrace to a civilized community. It is unsanitary in the superlative degree, with gates and hearths broken and out of repair; wall paper loose and hanging, which furnishes abundant hiding places for she devils, which infest the place in numbers like the stars in the heavens or the sands of the sea shores. There are perhaps eighteen or twenty people domiciled there and are as contented as the foregoing conditions will admit. These people are unfortunate and not criminals and their condition should be made better. Mrs. Soper is perhaps doing her best, but the task is too much for any one woman to undertake. And we recommend that the fiscal court take this matter in hand and put the institution in a sanitary condition.

We further suggest to our citizens who are charitably inclined and who spend much time and worry over the Belgian situation in the East, that they will find a fruitful field near Union for the exercise of the greatest of Christian virtues.

We naturally leave some unfinished business; some witnesses we have been unable to get before us. We suggest, therefore, that our foreman, or some member of this grand jury, be recognized to appear before the next one that these matters may be taken up and properly disposed of and that attachments be issued for witnesses who have been summoned and failed to appear.

Respectfully submitted,
T. J. CURTIS, Foreman.

CHANCE TO MAKE KENTUCKY GREATEST HOG RAISING STATE

10,000 Hogs Fattened From Slops and Distillers' Dried Grains In Daviess County Alone Last Year

(By Stephen Belles, in Bourbon Stock Journal)

Kentucky can easily be made the greatest hog-raising State in the Union. That has been demonstrated by Daviess county farmers. Last year about 10,000 hogs were fattened in that county on distillers' slops and dried grains.

Most successful were the experiments that the L. H. & St. L. railroad provided switches along their lines for the use of farmers to utilize this by-product of the distilleries for feeding

Officially Tested Out
The official tests of this feed have been very satisfactory in every way. It has the stamp of approval of the best chemists in the agricultural world. Men from experiment stations who know all about food values of different grains and foods have given it the highest recommendation.

The best feeders in the States in the Union are those which lead in hog production. Iowa, with its vast field of corn; Illinois, Missouri and Indiana in the order named, have thousands of rich farmers who made their money out of hogs. These are the raw grain feeders and sell their grain at the highest price in the biggest markets of the country. They have no such advantages as the Kentucky farmer has. At our very doors, and at a much lower cost than corn the Iowa and Indiana farmer feeds, we have the feed that will produce the best pork in the world.

Makes Prize Winners.

At a great barbecue on the Owensboro Fair Grounds last May, attended by 20,000 farmers and feeders, there were on exhibition scores of fine hogs fattened on distillers' dried grains and slops, and many cash prizes were awarded. Officials from the agricultural department of the State and Federal Government were present and made addresses on the proper care and feeding of hogs and the prevention of cholera. Specimens of distillers' dried grains and slops from various distilleries were also on exhibition and their respective food value were explained by experts.

Fattens Quickly.

One of the greatest advantages in feeding distillers' dried grain is the fact that nothing is lost. The distillers remove only the non-fattening portions of the grain, leaving an average of 40 per cent of the grain which the elements required to fatten stock. It has been supposed by many people that the best way to fatten a hog is to feed hard corn. But corn in the natural state yields about 13 per cent of protein, as much of it passing through the grain digesting process.

The Farmer's Opportunity.

The greatest single industry in Kentucky is its distilleries. This industry pays more taxes for the maintenance of the State than all other manufacturing industries combined. Thousands of tons of slops containing nutritious factors and elements are dumped into the waste map daily.

Kentucky feeders have not waked up to their opportunity. A comparatively small portion of this by-product is dried and shipped to Europe to be fed as dairy feed and for fattening hogs.

But why ship any of these dried grains to Denmark and Holland when we can use them here at home up to the full capacity of every distillery in the State, thereby increasing the profits of hog-raising and adding many millions of dollars annually to the wealth of the farmers of the state.

Cheaper Feed Than Corn.

Farmers should sell the corn they raise at the high price they usually bring, and buy for money more and better feed in the form of distillers' dried grains. By feeding these dried grains with alfalfa, clover or other green stuffs, hogs fatten quicker and better than by the use of corn alone and at very much less cost.

The Hyomei Catarrah Remedy Is Nature's Own Method.

It certainly would be ridiculous for you to take a pill to heal a burn, but no more so than to try to cure catarrah, coughs, croup, or head colds, by dosing the stomach.

Medicate the air you breathe with Hyomei—that's the sensible way. This treatment goes directly to the sore and congested membrane lining the nose and throat and makes a rapid and lasting end of distressing catarrah ills.

Hyomei is nature's true method of treating all diseases affecting the air passages, and the most economical. The Hyomei complete outfit consists of a small hand rubber inhaler and a bottle of Hyomei, and retails costs over a dollar.

If your trouble is deeply-seated and should require a little more of the liquid an extra bottle of Hyomei will cost but a trifle.

Hyomei is sold by B. L. Middelton with a guarantee to return the money if it does not make a satisfactory cure.—Adv. Feb. 17-24.

Matters of Importance.

"Five big issues will confront the next administration and General Assembly for settlement, and, perhaps, cut a large slice in the approaching State campaign," said Gov. McMurtry. "They are revenue and taxation, public roads, insurance regulation, revision of the electoral law, and probably constitutional amendments relative to woman suffrage."

Referring to them categorically, the Governor said:

"First—Revenue and taxation. This is bound to be a question of great importance.

"Second—Public roads. The fact that the State increases the State tax 3c a bushel on the $1.00 for the benefit of public roads at the last session of the General Assembly provides quite a large sum of money to be spent in their improvement, and the good roads bill, which it is said Congress will pass, giving to each State an appropriation for the benefit of road improvement, gives the road question great importance.

"Third—Insurance. It will be remembered that the insurance law passed by the last General Assembly was opposed by the insurance companies so strongly that many of them withdrew from the State and refused to do business in Kentucky for a time. A compromise was effected whereby a commission was appointed to prepare a bill for submission to the next General Assembly.

"Fourth—Revision of the educational law. There is a decided demand for such revision.

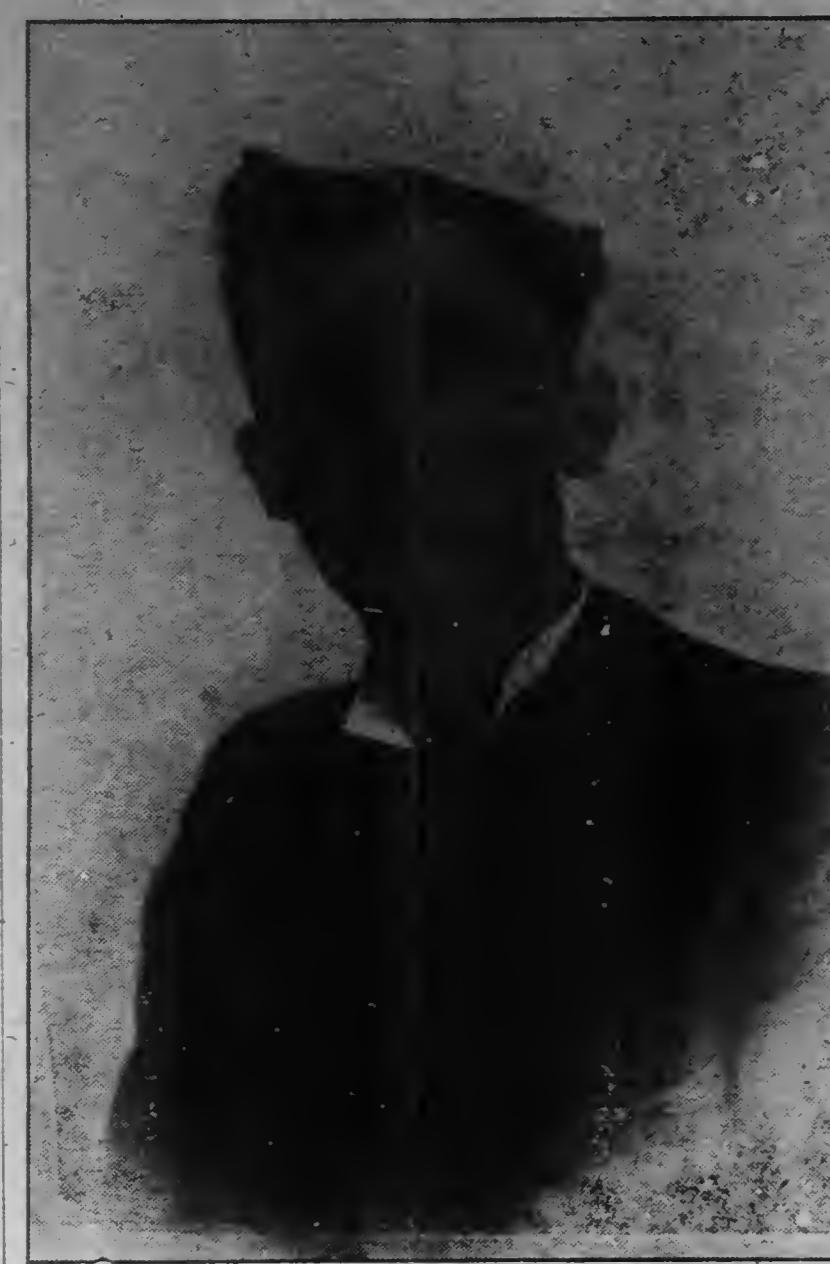

"Fifth—The outlook indicates that there will be great efforts made to enact laws in regard to State-wide prohibition and woman suffrage."

THE VOTERS OF KENTUCKY—I am a candidate for Secretary of State, subject to the will of the Democratic party to be expressed in the primary election Aug. 7, 1915. My party loyalty, my availability as a candidate, my conduct as a private citizen and my record as a public official are respectfully submitted for investigation and consideration. For more than three years I have served you as Assistant Auditor, and while the office is not an elective one, the duties are important and exacting. These I have honestly endeavored to discharge properly and efficiently. My experience, I feel, has especially equipped me to fill the office to which I now aspire. If nominated and elected as your Secretary of State, all the energy and ability which I have shall be earnestly devoted to the business of that department. No duty will be too arduous for me to perform faithfully, and none will be considered too trivial to receive careful and prompt attention. Feeling very grateful for the assurances of support already received, and soliciting the votes and influence of all, I am,

Sincerely yours,
G. B. LIKENS.

Reuben Baker.
